Culture, Communication & Ethics In Health Care

Tuesday 4:15-7:15 PM

TBD

Upstate Campus

Rebecca Garden, PhD. This course provides a model for collaborative and culturally sensitive and skilled communication in health care. Through the study of ethics cases, narratives, and literature, students will analyze disparities and discrimination in health care, especially for people who are deaf and disabled. 3 credits

Ethics and the Health Professions

Wednesdays 4:30-7:30 PM

TBD

Upstate Campus

Paul Prescott, PhD. This course examines the origins and the use of ethical theories in the clinical, professional, organizational, and political-economic fields of action in health care. 3 credits

Death and Dying in American Literature

Wednesdays 4:30-7:30 PM

TBD

Upstate Campus

Deirdre Neilen, PhD. This course intends to provoke thoughtful discussion and analysis about how we approach the subject of death and how we actually do or do not prepare ourselves for its actuality. What do people mean when they say, “do everything”? What do physicians mean when they say “treatment would be futile”? What does it mean to be a health care proxy? We will explore these and other questions through our analysis of fiction, poetry, drama, memoir and film. 3 credits

Disability and Public Health

Mondays/Wednesdays 12:45-2:05 PM

TBD

SU Campus

Katie McDonald, PhD. Factors influencing the health and well being of persons with disability, including models of disability, disability history, law and service, health disparities, health promotion, ethics, violence, and disaster preparedness. 3 credits

Public Health Ethics

Mondays 5:15-8:15 PM

TBD
