EXCEPTIONAL MOMENTS

IN TEACHING

The Norton College of Medicine recognizes exceptional teachers with the monthly “Exceptional Moments in Teaching” program. Honorees are selected via student assessments from courses and clerkships. Recognized teachers—including medical faculty, residents, nurses and other educators—are those who challenge students and provide an exceptional learning experience.

Conor Young, MD, PGY3 resident in the Department of Emergency Medicine at Upstate Medical University, is the October 2022 recipient of the Exceptional Moments in Teaching Recognition.

COMMENTS FROM DR. YOUNG’S STUDENTS:

“Dr. Young is one of the most effective teachers on the clerkship. Very passionate about teaching. He is always kind and willing to involve students in patient care. He focuses on teaching students how to be effective doctors rather than just teaching differential diagnoses and treatment options. He taught me how to follow up on orders that we placed and provided good feedback on how to present information succinctly and effectively in the emergency department. He was one of the residents who made me consider emergency medicine as a possible career.”

“Dr. Young is a very kind and gracious resident who was really invested in helping me get better in presenting patients, making differential diagnoses and making a plan for each patient. He has great bedside manner and was an exemplary example of what I would want to be like as a resident.”

“Dr. Young is an excellent preceptor and instructor. He loves teaching and thoroughly explains procedures/pathophysiology to medical students so that they could truly enjoy their clerkships. He also takes care of his patients in an effective and efficient manner.”
